

MS WALK

Fight with your feet.

I became involved in the MS Walk in 2002 when I started working at Saskatchewan Blue Cross. I began with donations to my colleagues who walked. Then I got more involved by walking in support of my friends who were affected by MS. In 2007, when I was suddenly not able to see out of both eyes and was diagnosed with multiple sclerosis, I began walking for myself. Now I ask you to join me again this year.

Today I continue to walk for myself and for others affected by this disease—especially those who have become good friends from my participation in the MS Society’s Strength Training Program. I walk for them because they can no longer walk for themselves.

I also walk to support my employer, Saskatchewan Blue Cross, which is celebrating its 20th Anniversary as Title Sponsor for the Saskatchewan Blue Cross MS Walk. Since that time, more than $9 million has been raised through the MS Walk program in our province.

I am stubborn and strong-minded and I will continue to fight because I believe we are on the brink of important medical discoveries. Whether it’s a cure or another treatment option, this is a very exciting time. Your support for the Saskatchewan Blue Cross MS Walk means more funding for the best Canadian-led MS research—research that will result in more treatments, information on management of symptoms, and overall a better quality of life for those affected. The cure to MS would mean relief and less worry for my family and for me. I worry about losing my independence—mentally, physically, and financially. I don’t want to be a burden to my family.

When you walk...I get stronger.

On behalf of me, this disease, Saskatchewan Blue Cross and all those affected by multiple sclerosis, please join me in the fight to end MS by registering for the Saskatchewan Blue Cross MS Walk today.

With gratitude,
